Hito Steyerl

The City of Broken Windows

Castello di Rivoli

Hito Steyerl focuses on the role of media, technology and the circulation of images in the era of digital nativism.

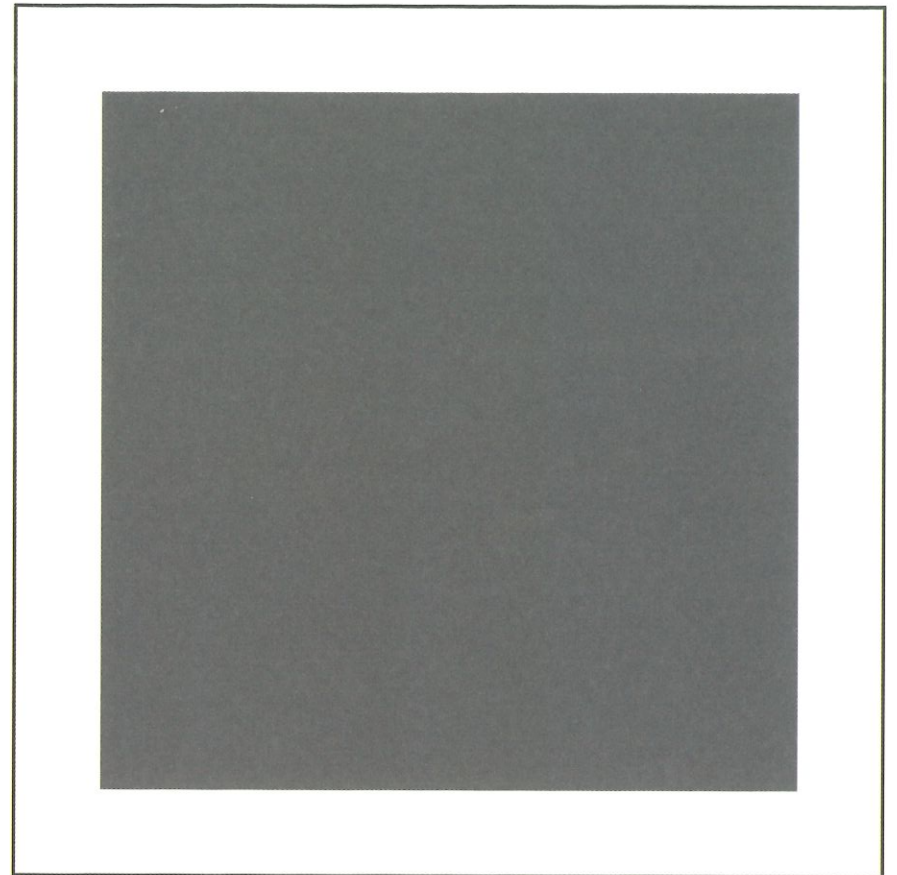

The artist creates installations in which film production is associated with the construction of architectural environments.

For her exhibition at Castello di Rivoli, Steyerl premieres The City of Broken Windows, 2018, stemming from research into the practices of Artificial Intelligence industries and urban painting. The City of Broken Windows revolves around the process of teaching artificial intelligence how to recognize the sound of breaking windows. Steyerl explores how AI affects our urban environment and how alternative practices may emerge through pictorial acts in the public space.

Chris Toepfer, protagonist of the new work, boarded up Castello di Rivoli with trompe-l'oeil window paintings. Steyerl's new project offers an intriguing perspective on how the digital contemporary imagination shapes our perception of reality.

Screens, windows, liquid and non-liquid crystals all tie together in this new installation.

Drafted by Carolyn Christov-Bakargiev and Marianna Vecellio.
